headboard that leaves room for the artwork above. Italian linens cover the upholstered bed, which is cozy, clean, and inviting.

Bryant added a bit of color with window treatments and a tan carpet, but she kept the room primarily simple and gray. She added glass shelves to a built-in bookcase. A drum light replaced the white ceiling fan that used to hang above the bed.

"I just wanted to make it very comfortable and contemporary," Bryant says of the master bedroom space. "I wanted to make a balance between the female and the masculine side. You want it to appeal to both genders as people walk through the house."

Women and men alike will find something appealing as they venture down to the main kitchen. Interior designer Deborah Parks of Deborah Parks Interior Design worked to create the family kitchen area combined with a multi-windowed bump-out and banquet table. Parks removed floor-to-ceiling floral striped wallpaper and added a chair rail to break up the tall wall space. She kept the kitchen's beautiful cherry cabinetry, but rotated the island 90 degrees to give the kitchen a more efficient flow. Benjamin Moore's Sandy Hook Grey color helps diffuse the red in the cherry cabinetry and keep the area understated yet classic. Parks also removed the doors on one of the double pantries and created a cookbook display.

island, and walls, completing the elegant ambience.

"The room is so user-friendly that you feel comfortable being there alone or with a group," says Parks. "I can envision one pondering the garden over a cup of coffee or reading the paper while conversing with family."

Clark Appliance handled the home's appliance upgrades. The main kitchen has a Profile induction cooktop and an Advantium over-the-range microwave, says Mark Kulh, a Clark Appliance salesman. Induction cooktops use magnetic energy to cook ingredients quickly and efficiently.

"When you put a pan on the stove, a magnet will stick to the bottom," Kulh explains. "It can boil water very, very quickly. It can go down quickly to lower temperatures for simmering or melting butter."

Clark Appliance worked in all three of the home's kitchens, including the main kitchen, the guest apartment kitchen, and the catering kitchen, which now boasts an industrial-quality Wolfe 48-inch range hood. Clark Appliance also helped outfit
